A Person I Admire

With ~~an~~ a good example, we can learn more things we don't know. To me, Shu-Chu Chen is the person I admire the most. Most of us must be familiar ~~to~~ with her. She was born in a plain township. While studying in elementary school, she ~~make~~ made a living by selling vegetables due to the fact that her mom ~~had~~ passed away or "because her mom had passed away". Although she was poor, she still concentrated ~~d~~ or "The poor girl still concentrated" on this work in order to raise her family. Unfortunately, her cousins perished one after another ~~owning to~~ because "owning to" is not a conjunction. It is a preposition they didn't have adequate money for their treatment. Shu-Chu Chen was mentally hit by this. However, she ~~doesn't give up instead of devoting~~ didn't give up; instead, she devoted herself to charity ~~events~~. For instance, not only did she ~~donated~~ an amount of money to her school, but also established scholarship for those in need. Her contribution to Taiwan is beyond description. Her spirit of helping other people and attitude ~~of~~ in facing life are worth learning. Thanks to Shu-Chu Chen, her ~~charity~~ charity work spreads like ripples. A large substantial number of people take action to doing charity work. As for me, I dedicate myself in volunteering service. Although I don't have the ability to donate money, I still can show my ~~passion to~~ love of this society.

1. Nice that there is a focus in your writing.
2. The biggest problem: sentences of similar length.
3. Use more advanced words

4. Some minor mistakes in grammar
5. You may write some right-branching long sentences.
